

Alejandro Loredo and Ruben Abarca were among students from the Guadalupe Center in Immokalee who recently planted a pizza garden and other plants with the help of volunteers from Goldman Sachs Community TeamWorks in Miami. The project, coordinated by the Naples Children & Education Foundation, includes a 900-square-foot, raised-bed garden in the center's schoolyard. It includes oregano, basil and tomatoes for pizza-making as a way to teach life science to elementary students.
